Observation

---

HTML5 promotes the separation of content from the style rules.

Style rules belong in CSS in the style tag in the head or in another file. Tags such as `` and `<center>` are deprecated (obsolete) in HTML5. This includes some attributes like `bgcolor` as these are now handled by CSS.

What's new in HTML5?

DOCTYPE declaration

Multimedia tags

Character set declaration

Support for mobile browsers

New tags for layout and content

DOCTYPE declaration

---

```
<!DOCTYPE html>
```

DOCTYPES are not HTML tags. They are instructions to your browsers about which version of HTML the page is written in.

Before this, there were varying DOCTYPES which were hard to identify

Character Set declaration

```
<meta charset="utf-8">

Character Sets define the characters to be used when displaying a symbol whether it's a letter, number, sign, or another symbol.

Specifying the character set helps ensure uniformity of your text across all browsers.

Support for mobile browsers

---

```
<meta name="viewport" content="width=device-width, initial-scale=1.0">
```

Browsers usually zoom out to fit the whole page. This meta tag tells the browser that the page is to be viewed at 100% and not zoomed out.

Multimedia tags

---

`<audio>` `<video>` `<embed>` `<canvas>` `<svg>`

HTML 5 has new tags for loading audio, video, and other forms of media on your webpage. Before, you needed Adobe Flash / Shockwave, Java, or Silverlight for plug-ins.

New tags for layout

<header> <footer> <article> <section> <aside> <nav>

These new tags give better meaning to specific page elements. This works better when selecting tags with CSS and whenever search engines crawl your pages to determine its content.

In practice

These are just dressed-up  tags that are easier to select.
